Currently Funded Grants

Principal Investigator, “Childhood, Adolescence, and Covid-Related Risk and Protective Factors in the Development of Adjustment in Early Adulthood Across Cultures.” National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, RO1HD054805, 7/1/22-6/30/27. Goals of this research include building a developmental model of young adult adjustment and maladjustment using mediators and moderators at the individual, family, and culture levels, including potential risk and protective factors; examining predictors of parent-young adult relationships across cultures that normatively differ in how changes in family relationships are experienced and negotiated in early adulthood; and examining the impact of COVID-related disruptions in education, work, and other important domains on subsequent adjustment.

Principal Investigator, “Primals & Developmental Psychology: Child and Adolescent Predictors of Young Adults’ and Their Parents’ Primals in Nine Countries.” University of Pennsylvania and the Templeton Religion Trust, 7/1/22-6/30/24. This project addresses questions of whether and how primals in early adulthood are predicted by childhood and adolescent experiences and how parents’ primals are related to their young adult children’s primals in the most diverse long-term longitudinal study ever conducted.

Principal Investigator, “Mentoring for TWCF Grantees to Sustain Academic and Professional Development.” Templeton World Charity Foundation, TWCF0537, 7/1/21-11/30/23. This project pairs TWCF’s Global Innovations for Character Development grantees with international senior mentors whose research interests and expertise are aligned with those of the grantees to provide ongoing mentorship to sustain grantees’ professional development.

Investigator, “The Impact of Mental Health Therapy on Job Creation and Business Outcomes in Youth and Female-Led Enterprises.” Massachusetts Institute of Technology Abdul Latif Jameel Poverty Action Lab (P.I. Arinze Nwokolo), JOI-22-00644, 7/1/22-12/31/23. This randomized controlled trial examines the impact of cognitive behavior therapy delivered through virtual reality on job creation and business outcomes in youth and female-led enterprises in Nigeria via improvements in depression, stress, and anxiety.

Investigator, “Longitudinal study of health outcomes and mitigating factors in the aftermath of the COVID pandemic.” National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (P.I. Manoj Mohanan), R01HD107420, 9/01/2021-8/31/2026. The overall goal of this project is to study children’s and adolescents’ trajectories of mental health, immunization, and primary healthcare utilization in the aftermath of the COVID pandemic in India.

Investigator, “Center for the Study of Adolescent Risk and Resilience.” National Institute on Drug Abuse (P.I. Rick Hoyle), 7/1/13-6/30/24. The goal of this study is to understand biological and social processes involved in adolescent self-regulation and substance use.

Sponsor/Mentor, “Dimensions of Child Adversity and Health Risk Behaviors in Young Adulthood.” Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (P.I. Susannah Zietz), F32HD100159, 9/1/19-8/31/22. The objectives of this study are to understand mechanisms in the global context through which exposure to different types of adverse experiences in childhood increases risk of adverse behavioral and psychosocial outcomes into early adulthood and to provide a series of training and mentoring activities for Dr. Zietz.

Previously Funded Grants

Principal Investigator, “Childhood Risk Factors and Young Adult Competence: Administrative Supplement.” National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, R01HD054805-14S1, 7/1/20-6/30/22. This administrative supplement builds on the ongoing Parenting Across Cultures Project by adding COVID-19-related questions to the annual interview battery and assessing COVID-related experiences at three additional time points each year to assess behavioral and emotional functioning in relation to the rapidly-evolving situation in each country’s response to the pandemic.

Principal Investigator, “Childhood Risk Factors and Young Adult Competence.” National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, R01HD054805, 7/1/17-6/30/22. The goal of this study is to generate empirical findings to develop a model of child- and family-level mediators and culture-level moderators of the role of childhood risk factors in young adult competence and maladaptation using the most diverse, prospectively studied, multi-national sample to date.

Investigator, “Intergenerational Persistence of Treatment Effects in Human Capital Interventions.” National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (P.I. Kenneth A. Dodge), R01HD093651, 9/1/17-6/30/22. This project brings together two longstanding studies (Fast Track randomized control trial and Great Smoky Mountains Study) to test how successful childhood interventions influence future parenting and whether benefits persist into the next generation.

Investigator, “Optimizing Prevention of Costly Adult Outcomes.” National Institute on Drug Abuse (P.I. Kenneth A. Dodge), R01DA016903, 7/1/15-6/30/21. The goal of this study is to understand the links between childhood risk and adult costs and to evaluate an effective prevention program’s capacity to target risk in order to improve health and reduce public costs.

Principal Investigator, “Biological, Familial, and Cultural Processes in the Development of Risk-Taking Behavior.” Duke Population Research Institute. 2018-2019. This study supplements the larger Parenting Across Cultures project with attention to biological factors in the Durham, NC sample to be able to address the question of how and why parental socialization and cultural processes can lead to risk-taking behaviors—that is, how social experiences get under the skin.

Principal Investigator, “Childhood Psychological and Environmental Risk Factors and Young Adult Competence and Maladaptation across Cultures.” Education and Research Initiatives in China Grant. 6/1/18-5/31/19. The goal of this project is to launch a new research collaboration between the Center for Child and Family Policy within the Sanford School of Public Policy at Duke University and the Global Health Research Center at Duke Kunshan University.

Investigator, “Parenting Adolescents.” Society for Research on Adolescence, 2016-2018 (PIs: Andrea Hussong and Deborah Jones). This grant funds a working group to develop new theories of parenting adolescents, with a focus on how parenting adolescents is similar to and different from parenting children and how traditional theoretical approaches may need to be refined in the context of contextual and cultural diversity.

Team Leader, “Schooling and Parenting: Implications for Students’ Academic Identity.” Bass Connections in Education and Human Development. 2016-2018. The aims of this project are to examine the relation between youths’ school tracking experiences and their academic identity and to determine whether parenting practices moderate the link between tracking and academic identity.

Principal Investigator, “Parenting, Adolescent Self-Regulation, and Risk-Taking Across Cultures.” National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, RO1HD054805, 7/1/12-6/30/17. The goal of this study is to understand how risk-taking develops across adolescence as a function of biological maturation (puberty and age) and socialization (parenting and culture).

Principal Investigator, “Parenting Across Cultures: Writing Work Group.” Jacobs Foundation, 2015 Marbach Residence Program. Using data from the Parenting Across Cultures (PAC) project, a longitudinal study of mothers, fathers, and children in nine countries, the aim of this residency period is to draft a set of four empirical papers, produce a brief theoretical paper on the state of the field of international developmental science, and outline a plan for future PAC publications.

Principal Investigator, “Global Human Development Intervention Research Network.” The Josiah Charles Trent Memorial Foundation, Inc. 7/1/14 – 6/31/15. The goal of this project is to foster the development of a new global network for human development intervention research in low- and middle-income countries.

Principal Investigator, “Parent Behavior and Child Adjustment Across Cultures.” National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, RO1HD054805, 9/30/07-6/30/12. The goal of this study is to address how parents’ discipline strategies affect children’s development by collecting and analyzing data from 12 cultural groups in 8 countries.

Principal Investigator, “Parent Behavior and Child Adjustment Across Cultures.” Fogarty International Center, RO3TW008141, 9/25/08-4/30/12. The goal of this study is to address how parents’ discipline strategies affect children’s development by collecting and analyzing data from two cultural groups in Jordan, to be coordinated with the parent grant funded by NICHD.

Principal Investigator of subcontract from Temple University, “Parenting Across Cultures.” Jacobs Foundation (P.I.: Laurence Steinberg), 3/1/10-12/31/11. The goal of this study is to examine judgment, decision-making, and psychosocial development in China, Colombia, Cyprus, India, Italy, Jordan, Kenya, the Philippines, Sweden, Thailand, and the United States to understand aspects of development that affect the choices young people make, including choices to engage in risky and antisocial behavior.

Principal Investigator, “Parent Behavior and Child Adjustment Across Cultures.” The Josiah Charles Trent Memorial Foundation, Inc. 7/1/03 – 6/31/04. This pilot project addresses the question of how parents’ discipline affects children’s adjustment in six countries.

Investigator, “Development and Prevention of Substance Use Problems.” National Institute on Drug Abuse (P.I.: Kenneth A. Dodge), 9/1/03 – 5/30/15. The major goal of this project is to examine the role that conduct problems play in the development of substance-use problems in young adulthood.

Investigator, “What Affects Outcomes in Group Homes for Youth?” National Institute of Mental Health (P.I.: Elizabeth Farmer), 8/30/07 – 8/29/12. The main goals for this project are to evaluate outcomes for youth in group homes, with a focus on overall levels of change and whether subgroups of youth show particularly positive or negative trajectories, especially in relation to iatrogenic effects of deviant peer contagion.

Investigator, “Development of Antisocial Behavior in Early Adulthood.” National Institute of Mental Health (P.I.: Kenneth A. Dodge), 4/1/04 – 3/31/09. The main goals of this project are to build an empirical model of how chronic antisocial behavior develops within each of three major interpersonal relationship contexts of young adulthood (other adults, romantic partners, and offspring) by continuing an ongoing prospective study that was initiated in 1987 for this purpose.

Investigator, Transdisciplinary Prevention Research Center. National Institute on Drug Abuse (P.I.: Kenneth A. Dodge), 9/30/03 – 9/29/08. The main goal of the Center is to address the pervasive influence of peers on adolescent drug-use behavior. Center members conduct basic science studies and translate that knowledge into novel preventive interventions at each of three levels of peer influence: (1) cognitive and emotional processes that operate intrapersonally but are influenced by peers; (2) the social psychology of interpersonal peer interaction in dyads and small groups; and (3) institutional peer effects at a macro-level.

Consultant, “Adolescent adjustment: An integrative examination of parenting, emotion regulation, and social information processing.” Jacobs Foundation (P.I.s: Anne-Marie Iselin and Laura Di Giunta), 10/1/11 – 9/30/13. The major goal of this project is to use data from the Parenting Across Cultures study to examine how emotion regulation, self-efficacy beliefs about emotion regulation, and social information processing mediate relations between parenting styles and adolescent psychological adjustment.
